INT. COMPUTER ROOM – DAY

JORDAN sits at the computer screen, typing, with ALEX.

> JORDAN
> I'm not used to setting up these > kinds of firewalls.

> ALEX
> This is the FBI. You're gonna have > a lot of "first time"s.

> JORDAN
> Great! It's really hard for me to > talk to girls. (beat) That was an > ill-timed joke.

> ALEX
> That's why I didn't laugh.

> JORDAN
> Okaaaaay– well! We have good news > and we have bad news.

> ALEX
> Bad news first. Maybe the good news > will fix it.

> JORDAN
> Bad news is, there's an encryption > code set in the foundation of the > Russian bug– it can burrow in, > undetected, and then bring down the > firewall, brick by brick.

> ALEX
> So what's the good news?

> JORDAN
> Good news is, I know who has the > encryption code. (beat) You.

> ALEX (PULLS OUT A GUN AND POINTS IT)
> Good news for me, not for you.
> Remember how I told you there'd be > a lot of first times? This is your > 1st time facing down a rogue agent.

> JORDAN
> Actually, my good news is the fact > that I already sent the transcript > of the hack over to Quantico. So if > you shoot me, it'll be treason and > murder. Simple copy and paste. I'm > definitely used to that.